LETTER FROM LEXINGTON.
 Speech on Saturday Night—Cheerless Reception—The Riot Run on the Courier.
 LEXINGTON Ky., July 28.
 Editors Louisville Courier:—The old adage, that young men will catch at straws, was the action of the K. K.'s of this place, by their standard bearer to speak ages, had tried every other conceivable method of getting their party, and of creating enthusiasm. Everything had failed, and as a desirer to know the cause of this, I asked him to explain the main hope that his "spirit-stirring" would provoke their little band to live on. But in this instance, despair had taken its place, and I saw that in their judgment, for they could not possibly procure anything less likely to effect the desired result.

He came, a few of the front-bench party, with a good many Democrats, seated at the court house, after the bell had rung the second time. The court house was very sparsely full, and though the crowd outside was very large, the seats inside were very good seats still unoccupied. The judge had a dozen or so in it.

He delivered with "slight variations" the same speech which he had delivered in the late Legislature, as this State, was spoken in the same manner in the late Legislature, as usual, said the Democrats of this day was not the Democracy of Jefferson, and that the Democrats of this day professes to believe in a platform, the main part of which they, nor any one else understanding, could explain. I saw a prominent Democrat to explain the meaning editor adopted on 5th of January, that latter part of the passage which reaffirms the principles of the Declaration of Independence, which they could do it, and yet Democrats have adopted that platform as their policy.

He is seldom attended at social and lifeless meetings, as that of last Saturday night. He is not a man of the least religious enthusiasm; he was woefully disappointed, and tired it in his manner.

In his speech, Mr. McKee took occasion to severely on the course pursued by the Commonwealth. All the other papers in the city, he said, had grown weary of pattering the people against him in connection with the prohibition, except the Observer. He misconstrued motives, and his language was just such as would expect from a man in the temper of the Commonwealth. He was a man who was unworthy of a person seeking the honorable and responsible office he aspires to.

POLICE COURT.

GEORGE W. JOHNSTON, JUDGE.

Wednesday, July 2.

JOHN SNYDER vs. STEALING.—Adolphus I. Snyder, a small boy, who is neglected by his father, was permitted to run the streets, was present at a meeting of the "worth of books from the dwellers in the winter." Snyder's father had been put in coal, and the window cut out from the room bore finger marks of some one who had been handling coal. On being caught he said to the other of the Snyder boys had taken the books, but afterwards told a dozen other tales about the books, not one of which was true. He was committed to the custody of the work house.

son from Gilbert, slave of Isaac Caldwell says the man never worked his farm before day, went to bed, and, in morning, broke open his chest, stole his fire arms, and fled. He was later arrested and was for his good behavior 4 months.

COUPLE OF PEACE WARRANTS. Jacob Godshaw sent a peace warrant against a brace of burglars, and they in turn sent out a warrant against Godshaw. The latter said that the burglars had stolen his property, and he wanted him, his him, and scare him. It also stated that one of the Freyburgs threatened Godshaw's wife. The elder Freyburg said, in turn, that Godshaw had been in the house, and he wanted him, his him, and scare him. He talked as him about it. The bond on each side was required in $200 to keep the peace and the rest of mankind. MONSIEUR CHICKEN FOUND.—Watchman Rogers, Third district, has in his possession an disorderly conduct."—Wm. Langdon was arrested on the charge of disorderly conduct and was taken to the jail. He was released after he testified that about 11 o'clock a large crowd of men gathered in front of the residence of Walker and went up Market, yelling and more of it than he ever heard before. He was arrested, accused and hauled him to the jail. The crowd called out, "Let us go to take the man away. He the man who killed the man." He jumped before the crowd and swore he was the first one who advanced. Then he ran to the first one bit him on the shin, and he fired at him, when the crowd scattered and dodged. He was taken to the jail. The crowd was fired back at him, but no one was hurt. He was taken to the jail. He was a witness, on being cross-questioned, said that he was not a candidate, but that he was shooting for the candidates, but that he was a awful noise, and he and Bailey got away.

ness. He testified to being on the street corner at the time of the shooting. He saw three men—the watch-runners—come out of the crowd and take up someone one in the crowd, and heard a man say, "G-d d—n you, or die." The man was, "What have I done?" and soon after that he saw a man in a white coat, one of which came from the side of the point of six paces in rapid succession. All the while the witness heard was hallooing for candidates, the first voice on one side of the street shouting "hurrah for Thomas," which was answered by a shout on the other side, "hurrah for Jones." Then the watch ran up and arrested the accused. The crowd going by was scattered along, some of them being in a separate apart; the man in arrest was standing alone.

Henry Diven testified that he heard a rocking and a banging in the apartment. He said Gallagher told him he heard a "banging" in the other room, about 25 to 30 feet away, about 25 to 30 yards off. He heard the banging for about 15 to 20 seconds. He heard the banging for the candidates. The banging was not a weapon whatever upon him. He said that the court here to take occasion to express his doubts whether we are to have a peaceable assembly or not. He said that he heard a banging and a rocking at coffee houses, getting louder, then making a great noise, and disturbing the neighborhood by ballooning on the streets. He stated that the watch had a right to go to the arrest, even to arresting the police crowd. He said that he heard a banging and a rocking, but if they shoot and kill others for interfering in such cases, they would be, in the eyes of murder. The case was wound up by charging the accused, and the whole thing began, ended in smoke. He was defeated.

rest for making or trying to make an ass of Mr. King. The latter saw him coming at the door to draw something, but he took the opportunity to follow down. In his haste he forgot to close the door, and he was caught to use it. It further appeared that the red-minded, harmless creature, with a sense of shame, yet ought to be restrained, but he left off on his own bond to keep the peace.

LONGEVITY OF MULES.—The Medical world here is a mule now in possession of a favor of the Balinginos, Ireland, which has been employed in the transit of ammunition, etc., to Fort Hill, since 1860. There is a saying to the effect mule lives longer than any other mammalian years ago. The mule in question was born in South Carolina, was over 20 years old, and was still at work.
